

The Great Brexit Betrayal

In this private report, you'll discover...

- * Why Brexit is now almost certain to be cancelled.
- * Which will cause the pound to spike 20.3% against the dollar.
- * And, how, with the right investments, you could turn that 20.3% into gains of 855%, 1,709% or even 6,838%! And turn £10,000 into £85,470, £170,940 or even £683,761.

Dear investor,

We Brexiteers have been stitched up. And it sickens me.

Right now, politicians from all the major parties are meeting behind closed doors. Their goal? To stop the UK from leaving the EU in October.

And when they do this – through a “Government of National Unity” – the 17 million of us who voted to leave will learn...

You don't get to vote against the EU!

This is the same lesson...

... the Danes learned when they voted down the Maastricht Treaty in 1992...

... the Irish were taught when they voted against the Treaty of Nice in 2001...

... and again when they voted against the Lisbon Treaty in 2008...

... dished out to the French and Dutch when they rejected the European Constitution in 2005...

Each time, the referendum was either re-run or the result was ignored.

And, sadly, it's going to happen to us.

Anti-democratic? Definitely.

Disgraceful? I'd agree.

And, when I think about how Remainers are going to rub this in our faces... how they're going to tell us how they were right all along...

Their smugness. Their arrogance. The shamelessness...

... It makes my blood boil.

How getting rich is the best revenge

But I believe we can have the last laugh.

In two ways...

First, I believe, Brexit or no Brexit, the EU is a "dead man walking."

Its failed policies are spreading economic misery across the continent. And whether it's the UK, France or Italy, a major country is going to leave and that'll sow the seeds the EU's collapse.

But the other way we can find solace is through the investment opportunity this has created.

Let me explain...

The pound is about to bounce back

You may remember that, after the referendum, Sterling plummeted 11.3% overnight.

It collapsed from $1.50 to just $1.33 – a 31 year low and the pound’s biggest ever one-day fall.

And the bloodbath wasn't over. Within a week, it was down to $1.29. And it's never recovered. Three years later, it's trading even lower - at $1.23.

So, let me ask you, what would happen if Brexit was cancelled?

You might think Sterling would shoot back up in value. And you wouldn't be alone.

In fact, 5 major banks were asked what would happen if the UK had a "soft Brexit" – where Britain would still be able to trade tariff-free with the rest of Europe.

HSBC and BNP Paribas predicted sterling would jump to $1.45. Nomura and ING estimated it would reach $1.50. And JP Morgan said $1.52.

Their average prediction was $1.48 – a 20.3% rise from the current price.

And, if you use the investment strategy I'm going to recommend, instead of 20.3%, you could make 6,838%.

That would be enough to turn a small investment of £1,000 into £68,376. Or turn £10,000 into £683,761.

That's if Brexit is either cancelled or happens "in name only."

But could that really happen?
